

Processed foods are a staple in the American diet, comprising more than half of adult energy intake. When eaten in excess, these shelf-stable, convenient, and tasty foods are known contributors to obesity, heart disease, cancer, Type 2 diabetes, and gastrointestinal disorders. However, changing

---

This technology was funded through the NSF Small Business Innovation Research Program (NSF SBIR).